31 years of independence of Bosnia and Herzegovina - "The country will continue on its path"

Today marks the 31st anniversary of Bosnia and Herzegovina's Independence Day, on which I would like to warmly congratulate the country and its people. With a clear result, the citizens voted for freedom and independence in 1992 - and a young democracy Bosnia and Herzegovina was born.

Since then, this country has gone through difficult times - and still has a challenging road ahead. But it is also making great progress: Through diverse efforts, Bosnia and Herzegovina now has EU candidate status. I am sure that the country will continue on its path toward EU membership and likewise integration into the transatlantic defense alliance.

One thing in particular should be emphasized: The people of Bosnia and Herzegovina have shown greatness with their solidarity for Ukraine and the people who suffer the consequences of the Russian invasion on a daily basis. Since day one, the vast majority of people in BiH have stood by Ukraine. They support the course of the EU and transatlantic partners.

They can be proud of the country and themselves, whether they live in BiH or in the diaspora, or have BiH roots.
