Adis Ahmetovic on foreign trip to Slovenia and Croatia - "Both countries can build bridges between still two worlds"

On (tomorrow) Wednesday, Adis Ahmetovic, member of the Bundestag and member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, will travel to Slovenia and Croatia. The five-day trip will focus on talks about the upcoming elections in Slovenia and an exchange on Germany's foreign and security policy.

"I am looking forward to the foreign trip to Slovenia and Croatia. Due to the current political situation, both countries play an even more important role for peace and stability in Southeastern Europe. As EU and NATO members, both have a great responsibility to contribute to stabilization and democratization in the Western Balkans, while at the same time they can build a bridge towards stronger EU rapprochement and EU integration of other Western Balkan countries," said Adis Ahmetovic, Member of the German Parliament.

In Slovenia, which also plays a leading economic role in the Western Balkans, talks with politicians and scientists are first on the agenda, as well as a visit to the German Embassy in Ljubljana. In the evening, Ahmetovic will attend a panel discussion on the 2022 elections at the University of Ljubljana.

On Friday, Adis Ahmetovic will travel on to Croatia. In Zagreb, he will meet with the German ambassador in Zagreb, Dr. Robert Klinke, and representatives from civil society and academia.
